

Cyberbullying presentation

As you get older and begin to use social media apps, it becomes more likely that you will experience or witness cyber bullying. Cyberbullying can be an extension of traditional bullying. It is a tool that is used to continue bullying that may already be happening at school or in your community. It is rare for cyberbullying to only occur online. Only 1% of children experience this.

Bullying can be described as repetitive, malicious behaviour that tries to establish dominance over a person or group of people.

Cyberbullying can include discrimination or hate crimes. This is where certain groups are targeted because of their gender identity, race, disability, special educational need or sexual orientation.
