

CD Cover - Combine skills

Album: Mothership Connection

Band: Parliament

Year: 1975

“We had put black people in situations (on album cover art) nobody ever thought they would be in, like the White House.

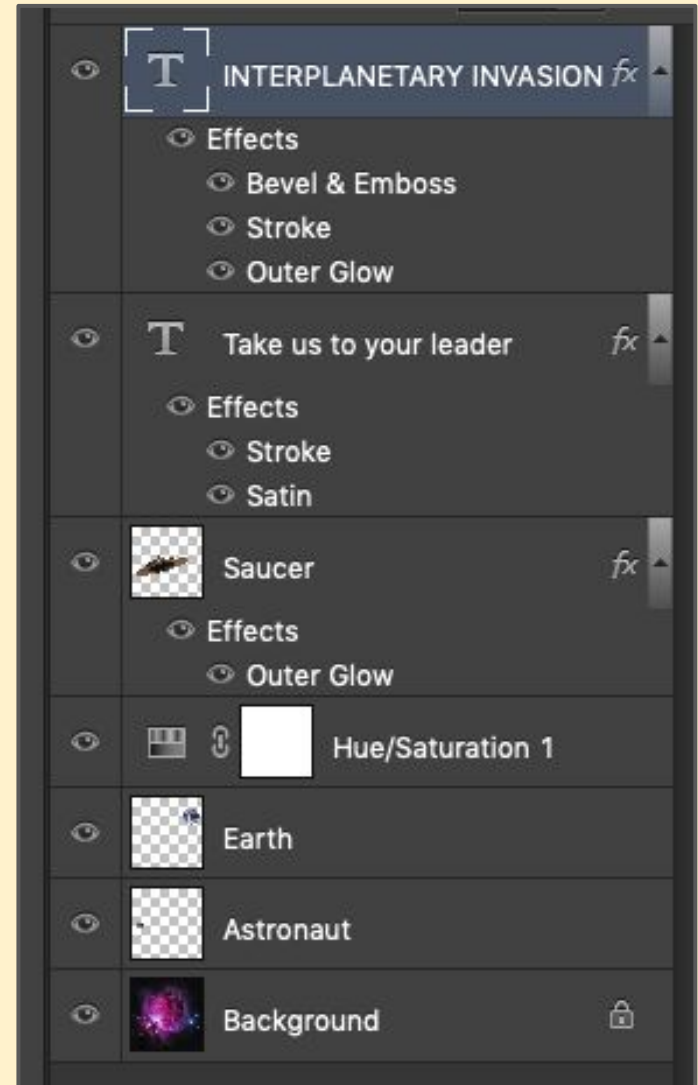

I figured another place you wouldn't think black people would be was in outer space. I was a big fan of Star Trek, so we did a thing with a guy sitting in a spaceship shaped like a Cadillac” (George Clinton)

“As a reaction to an increasingly fraught 1970s urban environment in which African-American communities faced the end of the optimism of the civil rights era, this flamboyant imagination (and let's be frank, exceptional funkiness) was both righteous and joyful”
